CHATGPT FINDS EVERY SETTLEMENT YOU'RE OWED

YOUR STEP-BY-STEP CLAIM GUIDE

Companies settle class action lawsuits all the time, and the money goes to anyone who qualifies and files a claim. Most people never claim because they never hear about it. This guide uses ChatGPT to go through your email, match every company you've done business with to the settlements paying out right now, tell you what you qualify for, and fill out the claim forms for you.

Start Here: How Settlements Work

THE PLAN

1. Connect Gmail to ChatGPT.
2. Match your companies to open settlements.
3. Find out what you qualify for, how much and the deadline.
4. Switch to Work and let ChatGPT fill out the claims.
5. Turn on a weekly check for new ones.

Before you start

Your account: ChatGPT on a paid plan (Plus or higher) for Work and its browser. Gmail works best, but there's a version without email below.

Your materials: 20 minutes, and the email address or PayPal/Venmo you want payouts sent to.

Your first goal: A list of settlements you qualify for, with deadlines, and your first claim filed.

When a company settles a class action lawsuit, it agrees to pay a pot of money to everyone in the "class": usually people who bought a product, had an account, or had their data exposed in a breach during certain dates. To get your share, you file a claim on the official settlement website before the deadline.

What to know before you start

- Most claims take a few minutes. Many only ask for your name, address and email. Some ask for proof of purchase, like a receipt or order number, which is often already in your email.
- Filing is free. A real settlement never charges you to file a claim.
- Only claim what you qualify for. Claim forms usually ask you to confirm your answers are true under penalty of perjury. Don't claim for something you didn't buy or use.
- Payouts take time. Money usually goes out months after the deadline, once the court gives final approval. How much you get depends on how many people claim.

HEADS UP

Nobody can promise you a certain amount. ChatGPT finds the settlements and helps you file, but the court and the settlement administrator decide who gets paid and how much.

Copy This First: Connect Gmail and Find Your Matches

Connect Gmail

- Open Settings. Click your name in the bottom left, then Settings.
- Open Plugins. Under Integrations, click Plugins, then Browse directory.
- Add Gmail. Find Gmail, click + and sign in with your Google account.

Then open a new chat and send this:

PROMPT 1 | COPY & PASTE

Go through my email and find every company I've bought from or had an account with,
then match them to every open class action settlement.

ChatGPT goes through years of your receipts and accounts and lines them up against settlements that are paying out right now.

TIP

Use more than one email address? Connect the one you use for shopping and online accounts. That's where the receipts are.

Step 2: Find Out What You Qualify For

Stay in the same chat and send this:

PROMPT 2 | COPY & PASTE

Which of these do I actually qualify for, how much could I get from each one, and when's the deadline?

Make it a list you can act on

PROMPT 3 | COPY & PASTE

Turn this into a table sorted by deadline: the settlement name, the official claim website, what I need to qualify, whether I need proof of purchase, the estimated payout, and the deadline. Then show me the receipt or email from my inbox that proves each one. Leave out anything where I'm not sure I qualify.

TIP

Start with the closest deadlines. A settlement that closes next week is worth more to you today than a bigger one that closes next year.

Step 3: The Trick, Let ChatGPT File the Claims

At the top of ChatGPT, switch from Chat to Work. Then send this:

PROMPT 4 | COPY & PASTE

Go file the claim for every single one I qualify for. Only use the official settlement website for each one. Fill in my name, address, email and any proof of purchase from my inbox, and stop before you submit each claim so I can check it.

On chatgpt.com, Work opens its own browser when it needs one and fills out the claim forms while you watch. When it asks to use a website, check it's the official settlement site before you approve.

Before you hit submit

- Check every answer. Make sure each claim matches what you actually bought and when.
- Pick how you get paid. Many forms let you choose PayPal, Venmo, a virtual card or a check. You enter that yourself.
- Never share your Social Security number or bank login. Ordinary consumer settlements don't need them.
- Save the confirmation. Ask ChatGPT to list every claim ID so you can check the status later.

HEADS UP

You stay in charge. Read each form and submit it yourself, because you're the one confirming your answers are true.

Bonus: Get Told the Second You Qualify

New settlements open every week. Send this in the same chat:

PROMPT 5 | COPY & PASTE

Check for new settlements every week and tell me the second I qualify for one.

ChatGPT sets it up as a weekly check and lets you know when a new one matches your email.

No Gmail? Use This Instead

You can do the same thing without connecting your email. List what you remember, or upload a few bank or credit card statements first.

PROMPT 6 | COPY & PASTE

Here are companies I've bought from or had accounts with in the last few years: [LIST THEM, E.G. AMAZON, YOUR PHONE CARRIER, STREAMING SERVICES, AIRLINES, STORES, ANY COMPANY THAT HAD A DATA BREACH]. Match them to every open class action settlement, tell me which ones I likely qualify for, how much each could pay, the deadline, and the official claim website.

Spot a Fake Settlement

Scammers copy settlement emails. Ask ChatGPT to check any notice before you click:

PROMPT 7 | COPY & PASTE

I got this settlement notice: [PASTE THE EMAIL OR LINK]. Is this a real class action settlement? Find the case name, the court and the official settlement administrator's website, and tell me if anything about this looks like a scam.

Real settlement	Scam
Filing a claim is free	Asks for a fee to "release" your money
Has a case name, a court and an official claim site	Vague, with no case name or court
Asks for name, address, email and sometimes proof of purchase	Asks for your Social Security number or bank login
Has a clear deadline set by the court	Pressures you to act within hours

Common Mistakes and Quick Fixes

If this happens	Try this
ChatGPT can't see your email	Connect Gmail under Settings > Plugins > Browse directory, then ask again in a new chat.
You don't see Work at the top	Work needs a paid plan. Use Chat to find the settlements and file the claims yourself from the links.
It lists settlements that already closed	Ask it to show only settlements with deadlines after today.
You're not sure you qualify	Skip it. Only claim what you actually bought or used.
A claim needs proof you don't have	Ask ChatGPT to search your inbox for the order. Many settlements still pay a smaller amount without proof.
The claim site asks for your Social Security number	Stop and ask ChatGPT to check the notice with the scam prompt. Ordinary consumer settlements don't need it.
You filed and nothing happened	Normal. Payouts usually come months later, after final approval. Keep your claim IDs.

Quick Reference: Your Settlement Plan

Step	What you do	What you get
Connect	Settings > Plugins > Browse directory > Gmail	ChatGPT can read your receipts
Match	Prompt 1	Your companies matched to open settlements
Qualify	Prompts 2 and 3	What you qualify for, how much and when
File	Switch to Work, Prompt 4	Claim forms filled out for you to check and submit
Repeat	The weekly prompt	A heads-up when a new one matches

DO THIS TODAY

Connect Gmail, paste the first prompt, then ask what you qualify for. File the claim with the closest deadline before you close the chat. Twenty minutes, and you'll know exactly what's waiting for you.
